

Electrical energy is transmitted through the National Grid at a high voltage to increase the current, so less energy is lost as heat.