

When alpha, beta or gamma rays are described as ionising radiations, this means that they remove from atoms.