

..... is the transfer of thermal energy between materials in contact, or between different parts of the same substance without the movement of particles.