

A transformer is used to transform the voltage of electricity in the National Grid back to safer levels before it enters people's homes.