

Nuclear power stations generate electricity using the energy given out when or plutonium fuels break up through nuclear fission.