

The smaller the distance between the object and the centre of its circle, the bigger the force needed to keep it moving in a circle.